

Wheel of Fortune v Family Feud: A Tale of Two Games

The Hawaii Department of Health in an official verification has indirectly confirmed that Barack Obama's birth certificate is not legally valid. That fact reveals the very, very dangerous games multiple bureaucracies have been playing with America's security. Though the results resemble Russian Roulette, the particulars are best illustrated by two popular game shows.

On Wheel of Fortune contestants take turns guessing what letters are in a mystery word or phrase. If a guess is correct, all the tiles having that letter light up, Vanna flips the tiles to show the letters, and the contestant is closer to solving the puzzle.

That's also how a Hawaii verification of birth works too. An applicant fills out a form, "guessing" the true facts of a person's birth, and the HI registrar writes back verifying as true whichever "guesses" match what is on a legally-valid record. If the lights don't go off on a particular "guess" it's either because it doesn't match the record or because the record it matches isn't legally valid so the true birth facts cannot be legally known. The statute does not allow discretion for the Department of Health to simply ignore some items that were requested to be verified (emphasis mine):

§338-14.3 Verification in lieu of a certified copy. (a) Subject to the requirements of section 338-18, the department of health, upon request, shall furnish to any applicant, in lieu of the issuance of a certified copy, a verification of the existence of a certificate and any other information that the applicant provides to be verified relating to the vital event that pertains to the certificate.

(b) A verification shall be considered for all purposes certification that the vital event did occur and that the facts of the event are as stated by the applicant.

Arizona Secretary of State Ken Bennett filled out that web form (Exhibit A, attached at end of this report or all exhibits can be seen here) guessing that Barack Hussein Obama II's true birth facts are what Obama's posted birth certificate claims: gender = male; date of birth = Aug 4, 1961; city of birth = Honolulu, HI; island of birth = Oahu; mother = Stanley Ann (Dunham) Obama; father = Barack Hussein Obama.

HI State Registrar Alvin Onaka sent back a letter (Exhibit C) verifying that they have a birth certificate for Obama, but the lights didn't go off for any of those birth facts Bennett guessed on the application. In an attached additional request (Exhibit B) Bennett asked Onaka to verify that an attached copy of Obama's posted long-form was a "true and accurate representation of the original record on file". Onaka wouldn't verify that either but did verify that the birth facts claimed on the posted long-form matched the birth facts claimed on the original record at the HDOH.

Even though the claims matched, none could be verified as the true facts because the record on file is not legally valid. That is the logical conclusion. Dr. Onaka indirectly confirmed that Obama's birth record is not legally valid.

Bennett additionally requested that Onaka “please verify the following items from the record of birth” (file #, time of birth, hospital, etc). That could be interpreted to mean either “verify as legally true” or “verify that these claims are ON the record of birth”. Since Onaka’s response to the application indirectly confirms that the record is non-valid, it is clear that he could only verify that the additional listed claims were ON the record, and not that the claims are legally true.

About a week later, the lawyers for the Mississippi Democratic Executive Committee (MDEC) sought help in refuting a RICO lawsuit filed by Orly Taitz implicating them in the Obama birth certificate fraud uncovered by Sheriff Arpaio’s posse. The veracity of Obama’s posted long-form and the truth of its claims were vital, they said. Rather than fill out a verification application (and have Obama’s long-form claims fail the test for legal truth again), they decided to play by Family Feud rules.

In Family Feud there are no right or wrong answers. Contestants simply try to give a response that matches what other people said in response. If a response/claim matches one of the most popular claims then the tile with that response lights up and gets flipped over.

So the MDEC lawyers never asked HI to verify the true facts of birth. They simply asked if the HDOH had a birth certificate for Obama and if the birth facts claimed on Obama’s posted long-form match the birth claims on the birth certificate filed at the HDOH. The answers – even for a legally non-valid birth certificate as Onaka had just indirectly confirmed Obama’s to be – would be yes and yes. And those answers wouldn’t legally mean a thing.

The Family Feud request could never accomplish what the MDEC lawyers claimed they wanted to accomplish. All it could do is deceive those who wrongly assume that Obama’s record at the HDOH is legally valid. If the person they intended to deceive is a federal judge, they are walking dangerously close to perjury and fraud.

Two possible reasons for non-validity are a late filing and a major amendment:

§338-17 Late or altered certificate as evidence. The probative value of a "late" or "altered" certificate shall be determined by the judicial or administrative body or official before whom the certificate is offered as evidence. [L 1949, c 327, §21; RL 1955, §57-20; HRS §338-17; am L 1997, c 305, §4]

Such birth certificates must be marked with LATE and/or ALTERED stamps on the face of the original and any birth certificate copy, including abbreviated birth certificates (short-forms), and they must note what documents were filed in support of the claims. Those elements are not “birth facts”; they are graphic signs of the record’s legal validity.

Those marks on Obama’s certificate would explain why both Obama’s COLB and long-form had to be forged even though the claims made on the forgeries matched the claims in the record. It would also explain why Onaka would not verify that the long-form was a “true and accurate representation of the original record on file”. A true representation would have to show the markings revealing the legal non-validity. Anybody who knew Obama’s BC was amended knew instantly that both the COLB and long-form were forgeries. . No Hawaii official has ever described Obama’s birth record as “legally valid”.

Obama's legally non-valid birth certificate would also explain why the HDOH altered their 1960-64 birth index to include non-valid records – the only way to get Obama's name listed in that index

It would also explain why a COLB for Virginia Sunahara, who was born on Aug 4, 1961 and died the next day, was disclosed to her brother and yet no record under her name was found in the database when queried. At that point somebody else's name must have been on her BC#'s record. If HDOH Communication Director Janice Okubo's BC numbering claims are correct, the details suggest it was Obama. Those claims were refuted by 1961 local registrar Verna K L Lee (as reported in the 2nd press conference of Arpaio's Cold Case Posse), but according to both claimed numbering methods, there is no way that the BC numbers that the HDOH has for Obama and at least 3 other people could have been on their birth certificates in 1961 – suggesting that the HDOH itself has been altering BC#'s on multiple birth certificates including Mr. Obama's.

The apparent deception and fraud by Hawaii officials is appalling. Their statements suggest that they knew of the amendment and affidavit(s).

Former DOH Director Chiyome Fukino referred to plural "vital records", though index lists show only a birth record for him. And though certificates are in bound volumes, she said she looked in the "files" and found his birth "record" was half-written and half-typed. She never referred to any record as being "legally valid" and never said that SHE verified that Mr. Obama was born in Hawaii.

Janice Okubo, through official open-records responses, indirectly confirmed that Obama's birth certificate was amended during the time that Obama was considering a run for the Presidency.

Former OIP Director Paul Tsukiyama indirectly confirmed that there was evidence filed to support the claims on Obama's BC, and his legal citation was tailored to address late and amended birth certificates. (And when the long-form was presented Obama himself said "People filed affidavits saying they had seen the birth certificate" – though no such affidavits exist anywhere; apparently affidavits were on his mind...)

Gov Neil Abercrombie publicly told a Star-Advertiser columnist there was something "actually written down" but that only "anybody who is honest about it" would be convinced. And when his friend, Mike Evans, called him to ask about it Abercrombie - according to Evans' interviews on multiple radio stations - told him that he had gone to the hospitals and couldn't get any records for Obama, that there wasn't any birth certificate for Obama in Hawaii, and that the first time he ever saw Obama Jr was at t-ball age. Evans later claimed he had not claimed to hear any of those things from Abercrombie but the audio recordings show otherwise.

Conclusion: There is much to distract people in the two verifications that Onaka made. Just a closing picture to solidify what is important here: Imagine that you go to a wedding. The setting is beautiful, the music lovely, the place jam-packed. The officiant asks the couple if they love each other and they both say they love each other. But when the officiant asks the bride whether she will take this man as her lawfully-wedded husband she refuses to answer. At that point, none of the glitter of the moment matters, only the substance: in spite of all the appearances of a wedding, no vow was made.

The verification application was Onaka being asked point-blank to say that the stated birth facts are legally true – an act he is required to do if he truthfully can. His silence to that unequivocal legal question is deafening. If a prosecutor in a crime show had asked and received that response, the show would have been over.
